

Fun and joy as medical students visit Baraka Children's Home

A group of 67 students from the University of Nairobi, College of Health Sciences' medical school visited Baraka Children's Home in Nairobi's Kahawa West area.

It was a great learning experience for the students and a day to remember for the children at the home.

The students were able to learn from the management of the home on some of the challenges the children face in the society and how such institutions try to amalgamate them into their system and take good care of them.

They were also able to learn on various ways university students could be involved in various initiatives aimed at alleviating the lives of the less fortunate in the society.

They also got a chance to play games with the children and also engage them in various activities such as mentorship sessions, health education and HIV testing.
